Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL'S OFFICE, }
December 31, 1860. }

SIR—I respectfully submit a statement of the public business conducted by me during the year now about to expire:

It will be observed that a large proportion of the cases, under the operation of recent legislation, were argued in Boston. One effect of this change of practice has been to reduce somewhat the number of questions in criminal law which are submitted to the court. It seems to me to deserve legislative consideration whether it would not be better to recur to the plan adopted when the present Superior Court was established, and to require that all questions of criminal law, arising upon exceptions, by appeal, or otherwise, should be argued before the Supreme Judicial Court for the Commonwealth at stated times. Such a course necessarily tends to secure great uniformity, and at the same time, discourages merely frivolous exceptions. It may occasion a little additional expense and inconvenience to parties, but not enough to prevent the fair examination of questions which deserve consideration, and the experience of past years indicates, I fear, that defendants have been too ready to take advantage of the facilities now afforded, for the purpose of obtaining delay by the suggestion of exceptions which are purely frivolous.

By the provisions of the General Statutes, ch. 14, sect. 11-13, clerks of courts and trial justices are required to transmit to the Secretary of the Commonwealth, returns of the criminal business, and the expense of conducting the same, of which their records contain information. I learn that the Secretary has nearly completed his abstract from these returns; and although considerable difficulty has been experienced in its preparation from the manifest errors and incompleteness of the magistrates' returns, I trust that it will prove a valuable and instructive public document. It may reasonably be supposed moreover that after the publication of one abstract, the different magistrates will more fully appreciate the duty imposed upon them, and that we shall thus annually obtain, what we have never before had, a complete statement of the character and cost of crime in this Commonwealth.

I feel it to be my duty to suggest that the experience of the past year has confirmed my previous opinion as to the unfavorable operation of the law of murder in cases where officers have been killed in the discharge of their duty. A case recently tried in Cambridge (Commonwealth v. James Hurley alias Howard,) places this difficulty in a prominent light. The prisoner was indicted for the murder of an officer on duty, at midnight, who had been directed to arrest him, the officer being unmistakably in the discharge of his duty, and lawfully using force at the time of the contest which resulted in his death. The character and conduct of the officer thus killed, and the circumstances of the case disclosed by the testimony, all indicated the commission of a crime of the most atrocious character; yet having been committed out of the sight of any person alive to testify, it was impossible for the government to prove that the fatal altercation commenced under such circumstances, as to warrant the jury in finding that the murder of the officer was committed with "deliberately premeditated malice aforethought." A similar difficulty was experienced in the case of William McNulty, who was tried in 1858 for the murder of officer Hodsdon in East Boston. I fear it will continue to be experienced in all similar cases; and that such cases will continue to recur so long as desperate burglars prowl about our streets at night, no one can doubt. Assaults upon officers are upon the increase, and require for their prevention, the enactment of sterner laws. It seems to me that the public interest and security imperatively demand such a change in the law of murder, as will constitute the murder of an officer in the discharge of his duty a case of murder in the first degree. Officers are authorized to use force, and it should be the presumption of law that an officer's use of force in any minor nuisance case, which he does not live to explain, was lawful and necessary. This would be in harmony with all the analogous law, and a fatal resistance to the lawful exercise of force would seem to present in fact, as it should in law, all the characteristics of murder. Similar considerations suggest the propriety of including in the class of murder in the first degree all murders committed in prisons, which, like the murders of officers, have been latterly of too frequent occurrence. It may be added that the circumstance of imprisonment indicates of itself a degree of infamy in the criminal, and where the imprisonment is for life, it is obvious that the death penalty can alone possess any terror which can operate to prevent the most terrible crime.

By the statute of 1859, ch. 282, it was provided that special terms of the supreme judicial court for the trial of capital cases might be convened by the order in writing of the majority of the justices directed to the sheriff. This Act, adopted just before the completion of the General Statutes was not incorporated in that body of laws, but it is not supposed that the omission was intended, and it is thought that the public convenience would be subserved by its re-enactment.

The pending case between this Commonwealth and the State of Rhode Island has been the subject of negotiation for the past year, but the conclusions arrived at by the counsel for Massachusetts were submitted to the governor and council on the ninth day of April, 1860, and the whole matter has since remained in the control of the executive department, and up to the day of the date of this communication, I do not learn that decisive action has been had.*

I think the experience of the year has exposed a defect in the criminal law, which requires legislative supervision. The General Statutes allow an almost unlimited right of appeal in criminal cases for defect in matter of law apparent upon the record (Gen. Stat. ch. 114, sect. 10) a right which the supreme court had decided not to exist under stat. 1840, ch. 87, except in civil cases. While the right of exception is so fully recoghas nearbre is no need sity for allowing this right of appeal, but although now absolute in terms, there is great difficulty in preparatiog its abuse, for the purpose of delay. It is respectfully magistrat that some modification of the law is necessary.

instru behalv of those who may succeed me in this office, I desire to suggest that the public convenience would be promoted by furnishing the Attorney-General's office with a series of the statutes of the Commonwealth and of the reports of the decisions of the Supreme Court. The office has been so recently established as one of the executive departments having a fixed place of business at the State House, that it is not so well furnished with these somewhat important books, as several of the other departments of the government.

The experience of the last year, and indeed of the last three confirms me in the opinion that although some important cases have arrested the public attention, yet that, upon the whole prime is not upon the increase in the Commonwealth, at least that it does not increase in proportion to the increase of population. The administration of criminal justice is becoming more perfect; and the number of convictions may be greater than before, but I cannot think that the number of violations of law has been enlarged. On the contrary, it may be safely said that life, liberty and property are every day becoming more secure in the Commonwealth.

I have the honor to be

Most respectfully, your obedient servant,

STEPHEN H. PHILLIPS,

Attorney-General.

To the Honorable Speaker

of the House of Representatives.
